Chemours Statement on Vigneron PFOA Trial - Punitive Phase

On January 5, 2017, a jury in Ohio concluded the second phase of the Vigneron PFOA trial and determined that DuPont is liable for $10.5 million in punitive damages in addition to attorneys' fees. The jury in the case also determined, at the conclusion of the first phase of the Vigneron trial on December 21, 2016, that DuPont is liable for $2.0 million in compensatory damages.

We expect DuPont to appeal the verdict, subject to post-trial motions, to address important, unresolved issues that affect the broader, ongoing multi-district litigation (MDL). These claims will be evaluated on an individual basis due to the unique facts present in every case. Litigation of this kind typically takes place over many years, and interim results do not predict the ultimate outcome. As previously disclosed, DuPont is the named defendant in each of the cases and is liable for any judgment. In the event DuPont claims it is entitled to indemnification from Chemours as to some or all of the judgment, Chemours retains its defenses to such claims.

The Vigneron case was selected by the plaintiffs as the first trial following the conclusion of the six bellwether cases in the MDL. The six bellwether trials all have been tried, resolved, appealed or otherwise addressed.

The trial court announced that starting in May 2017, 40 individual plaintiff trials will be scheduled for a 12-month period. Of the 3500 cases in the MDL, the trial court's multi-year plan pertains to the approximately 270 cases claiming cancer. Based on the current plan, the remaining cases—comprising approximately 93% of the docket of which the majority allege high cholesterol and thyroid disease—remain inactive.
